LETTER FROM CPL. GILBERTSON

Dec. 22nd 1942

Dear Mr. Cooley:—Received the very nice parcel the people of Chinook sent to me for Christmas, of which I thank you all very much. Hoping you will thank each and every one for the parcel. The flash light was a very handy thing over here in these blackouts. The cake and meats and also lots of things that the parcel contained were really a luxury and a big treat and can't be had over here very much, so you see it was a real pleasure to receive this good stuff to eat. Only wish I could be back in Canada right now, there's no place like home as the saying goes, but we all hope to be back home with you again in the near future. Say hello to every body for me John, to all the boys in the Garage and Len. I am in the best of health. Hoping this short letter finds you all the same. Will close wishing yourself and Len also the people of the Red Cross a very Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Sincerely Yours

Farmers See Acute Labor Shortage

ROSALINE Jan. 19 (C.P.)—Farmers in this district about 80 miles southeast of Edmonton anticipate a real crisis in a shortage of farm labor, and believe the condition is the worst in the history of the district, a recent survey shows.

Most farmers reported much of last year's crop yet to be threshed before plowing and sowing can be started, despite use of all available help including high school boys and girls.

Some farmers advocate release of farmer soldiers, now in the army, to aid in getting essential farm work done.

A Farewell Card Party and Dance will be held on Friday evening, Feb. 5th, in the Chinook Hotel, in honor of Sgt. and Mrs. Earl Robinson. Ladies please bring sandwiches.

The Ladies Card Club met at the home of Mrs. Lee. Honors were shared by Mrs. L. Robinson and Mrs. Wilson. The Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Nicholson.

Bridge And Whist Party Held

Mrs. L. Robinson and Mrs. E. C. Pfeiffer entertained at a whist and bridge party on Monday evening, in the Chinook Hotel, in honor of Sgt. and Mrs. Robinson, of Victoria, B.C. The evening was spent in playing six tables of bridge and six of whist. 1st prize awarded to ladies, Mrs. A. S. Nicholson and 1st. to gentlemen, Mr. and Mrs. F. Barros, and for gentlemen, Mr. G. Aitken.

In whist, prizewinners were, first, ladies, Mrs. L. Withell and men's, Mr. Len Cooley. Consolation prizes went to Mrs. K. Gulleckson and Mr. W. Zawasky.

At the close a very fine lunch was served by the hostesses to 50 guests.

BUTTER CONSUMPTION TEMPORARILY REDUCED

It has become necessary to reduce the current rate of consumption of butter, and accordingly changes have been made in the dates on which (brown) spare "C" coupons of the current ration book may be used.

Spare "C" coupons 10 and 11 may not be used for the purchase of butter. Coupons 1 to 4 inclusive, have already expired.

Expiry dates for spare "C" coupons 5 to 8, inclusive, have been extended to aid consumers in stretching out the butter allowance over the period from now until February 28th.

Each coupon will continue to be good for the purchase of one-half pound of butter and will be good only on the dates specified below:

HERE IS THE NEW SCHEDULE

Coupon Number	Good for purchase beginning on:	Not good for purchase after:
5 and 6	January 18th	February 28th
7 and 8	February 1st	February 28th

1943 OBJECTIVES AND FARM LABOUR

No doubt prairie farmers resolved, on January 1st, to meet the farm production objectives made public by the government a few weeks ago. Some of the increases for 1943 over 1942 are: oats, 12%; barley 11%; flax, 63%; alfalfa, 17%; cattle, 9%; hogs, 28%; sheep, 12%; eggs, 26%; creamery butter, 15%; powdered milk, 41% (decreased condensed milk, 27%).

In 1942, farmers responded nobly to demands for food products. Can they meet the 1943 requirements? That they will try, no one doubts. Certainly the increases in food products outlined above are urgently needed; but let us not be over-optimistic. Last year, pasture and feed crops were abundant as never before. Last year, besides supplying enormous quantities of food, the prairie farmers released thousands of their numbers, including many of their ablest men, to the armed forces, and to war industries in cities. Next year may be dry, and next year farm labour will be far more scarce.

It is useless simply to hide our heads in the sand or to look for miracles. Failure to meet the 1943 production objectives might be extremely serious, but is the probable outcome if a realistic plan to meet farm labour problems is not undertaken very soon. Either the supply of farm workers must be increased or the workers must be re-allocated in some way so that farmers are not obliged to release cattle, delay corn-harvest and so forth.

At present it looks as though the problem is just delayed in the farmer's lap. Farmers are not to expect government guidance and to expect it soon.

SANDS OF HAZARD

By J. B. RYAN

CHAPTER III.

THE hood of the barracan had fallen back, revealing the coal-black hair of the strange girl. As Jack Storey obtained his first full glimpse of her flawless features and pale olive complexion, a sudden lunge on the part of the girl broke the grasp of her two captors.

"No, no!" she cried, plunging blindly through the gathered soldiers. "You must not hinder me!" But the police were too many. An arm whipped out, and the girl was made prisoner once more.

The sergeant grunted. "You do not wish to appear before Captain Lebeau? Then you were surely responsible for the death of this man?" "I did not kill him," the girl had forced herself into a measure of composure. "Nor, for that matter, did Monsieur le Americain."

The non-com gestured to his men. "Come. The Captain can question these people."

Jack Storey fell in step with the girl as the couple were marched along the street. "Do not be alarmed, Mademoiselle," he tried to reassure her. "The officer in charge of Ain Safa will be just. We shall be free as soon as a few routine details are completed with."

The starlight touched her white teeth as the girl attempted to return his smile. "Oh, Monsieur Storey," she murmured, "why did you remain in the coffee-house until the police arrived? Then I would not be in this predicament."

"But we can prove that Ismeddin was bent on robbery."

"I suppose so," her voice sank lower. "You will go free, but I—"

She took advantage of a narrowing of the street to press closer to him. "Monsieur Storey," she whispered, "I tried to save you from Andre Ribbott. Would you help me in turn by stating that I am your sister?"

"But I have no sister—" he began, then checked himself. "Of course, Mademoiselle. What is your name?"

"Annette," she told him. "That much of my right name will arouse no suspicion—if you do not fall me."

THE conversation was ended by their arrival at the tall building that was the headquarters of the Spahis. The commander of the garrison, Captain Lebeau, was at his desk. The captain heard the report of the sergeant, wrote the names of John Storey and Annette Storey in a ledger, then informed the prisoners that the case would be dealt with in the morning; Algeria being a part of France and the death of a native in Ain Safa receiving the same consideration and investigation as a killing in Paris itself.

Annette's disappointment over their detention was such that Storey seated in the cheerless room that was his cell, was inclined to the belief that the girl was in fear of the law. Yet she had risked exposure to save him from the knives of the Kahiri. The least Storey could do was to keep up the pretense of relative calm, so far, had gone unquestioned.

However, Storey had reckoned without the efficiency of the French, even in such an isolated post as the oasis of Ain Safa. The morning that followed a sleepless night was well advanced before the door of Storey's cell was unlocked. As he preceded the guard down the corridor he encountered Annette being escorted to the office of Captain Lebeau.

"There is a slight irregularity here, Monsieur Storey," Lebeau studied a typewritten paper in his hands. "We radioed Gardinal last night, checking up on your story. Gardinal states that you lived in that vicinity for almost 10 years, ever since your now-deceased father came to Algeria to form a partnership in a sheep-raising business with Kaid Ibrahim. The enterprise was yours since the death of the kaid three years ago. Recently you sold your sheep and lands and are now on your way to the United States." The officer paused. "All this is true, Monsieur?"

"That's my dossier," nodded Storey. "Now, about that 'Berber' who was shot—"

"One moment, please." Captain Lebeau held up a hand, his eyes alight on the printed report. "There is also a description of you which seems to tally with your appearance. Height—five and eight-tenths meters; hair—dark brown; eyes—blue; cleft chin, and a nose not exactly straight. However," Lebeau looked over the top of the paper, "there is no mention of any sister."

Storey smiled. "Naturally there would not be. Annette spent all her life in America. She was to meet me in Cairo, but she could not wait, and came on to Ain Safa instead."

THE Frenchman cleared his throat, and he dropped his official attitude long enough to smile at the girl standing beside Jack Storey. "I hope that also proves true. It grieves me to keep one so charmingly beautiful under lock and key. I would hate to send her to Algiers or to Vichy."

"What makes you doubt her?" demanded Storey. "I'll take all the blame for that street fight. She had nothing to do with it."

"Monsieur Andre Ribbott was with me when these reports came in. When it was disclosed that Monsieur Storey had no sister, Ribbott suggested that I radio a description of the Mademoiselle to Algiers and Algiers." He glanced at the girl once more. "Algers asks that you be held pending investigation. They are quite certain that you are Annette Fournier."

To the eyes of Lebeau the girl remained unmoved. But Storey saw her hand tremble below the level of the desk clench involuntarily. Annette Fournier—the name meant nothing to Storey. But, noting the declared dislike of the girl and the watchful gaze of the captain of the Spahis, he sensed that Annette Fournier must be a personage of importance.

"Well, Mademoiselle," queried Lebeau. "Are you Annette Fournier?" "Nonsense," Storey interrupted. "I have told you she is my sister."

"I am afraid we cannot accept your unsupported statement, Monsieur Storey. If she is Annette Fournier, I shall lose my position if I allow her to go."

"Just who is this Mademoiselle Fournier?" "A traitor to France," said Lebeau. "An agent of De Gaulle, the man who would create civil war in France. The Free French have been declared outlaws. He has done this in spite of that, Annette Fournier manages to fit from end to end of French Africa preaching the gospel of revolt against the proper heads of the Republic. Already Vichy views her activities with anxiety."

"(Monsieur le Capitaine), the girl approached the desk; 'I shall tell you the truth. I am Annette Fournier.' There was a short silence. 'You know what this admission means, Mademoiselle?' Lebeau asked gently. 'The law against the adherents of the rebel De Gaulle is harsh even in its most lenient part.'

"It means at least prison and perhaps—since I have caused considerable trouble—perhaps death," smiled the girl. "We are both French, Monsieur. You are, I gather, loyal to Vichy. Each of us, in his own way, has the interests of our stricken country at heart. She leaned over the desk-top. 'Alons,' she hummed, 'enfants de la patrie—when shall we hear that in Paris once more. Capt. Lebeau?'"

THE muscles tightened about the Frenchman's jaws. "Do not play upon my sympathies, Mademoiselle. I made my decision when France fell. I believe that Petain, and not De Gaulle, is the man who will bring our country safely out of the mad storm the world has become."

"I am not asking you to transfer your allegiance," said Annette. "Is it not possible for you and me, followers of rival factions, to work together in the behalf of the France we both love? Keep me here, Captain, or send me to Algiers. But I beg you to see that Andre Ribbott does not leave Ain Safa."

"Ribbott?" Lebeau frowned distrustfully. "Already Monsieur Ribbott has left the oasis with his sheep, bound for Touggourt."

"He is not going to Touggourt!" cried the girl. "He is taking those sheep into Libya. Can you not see it, Monsieur? Why should Ribbott be in Ain Safa, so close to the border? Why should the men who drive the sheep be Kahiri men not of Algeria?"

Lebeau shook his head. "Monsieur

Ribbott allowed me to examine his papers. There is no reason to doubt his integrity, Mademoiselle. He is a representative of the French government."

"Monsieur!" pleaded Annette Fournier. "Hear me! It is true that a man named Andre Ribbott was sent to Algeria to buy food for France, but it is a different man who now goes under that name. This man whom we know as Andre Ribbott may be French, but he is a renegade. He is neither loyal to France nor to Vichy. He is using the money and the authority of the real Andre Ribbott to begin his purchases. I am now known, and remained unidentified because his features were washed in. Yet, a general description of the dead man falls with that of the man whom I suspect of having taken his place."

"Suspect?" repeated Lebeau. "Then you cannot prove your charges, Mademoiselle?"

"Not yet," she admitted reluctantly. "I have trailed this Ribbott across Algeria, but so far his actions have been what we would expect of the man he pretends to be. But it is in Ain Safa that he must show his hand. You say he departed this morning, Captain. Would you send out a detachment of your police to see whether he has in truth gone toward Touggourt or turned east toward Libya?"

"This is no trick, Mademoiselle Fournier? You lied to me in the beginning."

ANETTE's voice became more persuasive. "What have you to lose, Monsieur le Capitaine? I am your prisoner. You will be commended for capturing Annette Fournier. Think of the further glory that will be yours if to that exploit you add the feat of frustrating the designs of the renegade whom we must call Ribbott. It is not that the show is destined for the Germans—which would not disturb certain elements in Vichy—that you must consider. But your countrymen and mine are waiting for food."

The French officer turned his head. "Sergeant Jardin," he addressed the non-com at the door, "ride out of town with your men and learn for me just where Monsieur Ribbott has gone with his sheep."

The sergeant touched his hat and departed. Lebeau then nodded to the nearest of the native guards. "You will conduct Mademoiselle Fournier back to her cell."

As the girl turned toward the door, Jack Storey was about to follow when the captain remarked, "Not yet, Monsieur Storey. You will remain for a further word with me."

AIRGRAPH MAIL

In the 18 months since the service was started, fifty million airgraph letters have been sent between members of the forces and their relatives. Airgraphers are being sent out from Britain at the rate of more than a number a week, and a similar number are arriving in the British Isles from overseas.

GOOD RESOLUTION—BUDGET EXPENSES

In 1943—Plan Your Spending

So many bills! How can you get out of the red, have the things you hoped to have this year? Budgeting's the answer.

But, you object, that will mean pinching pennies, MORE things to give up! Not at all. An old-fashioned idea—that budgets tell what you can't have. These days your budget invites: "Come, decide what you want most. Let's plan your spending so you can have it."

So, as 1943 dawns, take stock. Estimate your outgo by listing expenses like rent, insurance, clothing, food.

Comparing your own expenses with those of people on similar incomes, you may discover what items are too high. Rent perhaps is costing much more than 20 per cent. of your income.

And amazing to see how much money has just leaked away! You could have bought that new furniture or clothing twice over.

Our 32-page booklet explains budgeting for all incomes, tells how to apportion your money. Includes buying pointers, has raised pages for year's entries.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "How to Budget and Buy For Better Living" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermott Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Women's Naval Service

The Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service In Need Of Recruits

The Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service is actively recruiting Canadian women between the ages of 18 and 45 in 22 different categories. Girls with training and experience will find no difficulty in choosing work for which they have been fitted. In the case of younger women just out of school, the service offers ample opportunity to pick work for which they have a liking and aptitude. Advancement is progressive through the ranks, and depends entirely on the proficiency displayed and the individual's application to the work at hand. Most categories are divided into three classes and the daily rate of pay is increased as promotion for proficiency is made from one to another.

At the present time, the need is great for cooks and stewards. In the former category, any woman who has an aptitude for cooking but whose previous experience is limited, could be enrolled as a cook, and trained. Girls with previous employment in general domestic service are preferred, but those who are accustomed to housework and like it can be trained to do this type of work. Living and working conditions are ideal at the Training Establishment at Galt, Ontario, to which the girls are drafted upon acceptance. The uniform allowance is very generous and the uniforms themselves are neat and becoming.

Information of any description may be obtained by applying to the W.R.C.N.S. Interviewing Officer, care of the nearest R.C.N.V.R. Divisions in this province.

No Air Mail Between Canada And Britain For Civilians

Air mail from Canada to civilians in Britain has been discontinued, postal authorities said at Ottawa. Airgraph still travel by bomber, and so do as many as possible of the special blue air mail forms to men in the forces. However, a large percentage of these at present go by boat also.

A similar situation exists for mail travelling from Britain to Canada. There is only sufficient aircraft to carry about 10 per cent. of the air mail, officials said.

HIGH WAR MILEAGE FOR C.P.R. LOCOMOTIVE

A record of 19,053 miles in one month is included in this Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive's wartime showing, in keeping with the Company's policy of getting maximum service from all equipment in order to fulfill its vital role in the fight for democracy's survival. In two other months, Locomotive 2859, one of the Royal Hudson class, was close to its peak mark in mileage with totals of 18,265 miles and 18,452 miles while its six-month average was 17,197 miles. Other Royal Hudsons clocking off extra miles at present include Locomotive 2855, which operated 17,847 miles in one month, and Locomotives 2838, 2839, 2840 and 2841—all on the Toronto to Port William run—which averaged 16,000 miles monthly over a half-year period.

The crown proudly carried on this locomotive's running board is a mark of honor for all of the "2800" class, for it was Locomotive 2850, sister engine of the ones now setting high mileage marks, which took Their Majesties across Canada in the Royal Visit of 1939. Authority for the use of the crown marking was given after that memorable journey.

TIME BOMBS

To meet the fanaticism of our enemies we need a stronger fighting faith and a greater idea. Is there anything that we could call Canada's Big Idea, which could rally millions to give their utmost in whatever job they are called to, to feel that whatever they are they are fighting for Canada? If we look back at our history, perhaps that idea was best summed up by one of the Fathers of Confederation, who said, "Let us have Dominion from sea to sea". This proved a big enough idea to unite the builders of this country. It is big enough to unite all Canadians now when our very existence is far more seriously threatened.

In the wars of arm we have begun to out produce our enemies. But we have to meet not only the force of their arms but the force of their ideas as well, and the tremendous forces of fear, hate and greed let loose on the world to an extent never known before. To answer them adequately we will need more than human powers. It will not be the work just of a few. It is the privilege of every man who decides that God shall have Dominion over that part of Canada which is himself, who thereby makes the power of God the solvent of the forces of fear, greed and hate in himself and in the situations around him.

The growing number of those who are doing this today have democracy's answer—the secret of pulling together as free men. They are fighting for Canada's Big Idea, an idea big enough to win the war, secure the peace and build a new world. Then we can show to a war-weary world how free men work as one, though of widely different races and creeds, and thus make real the prophetic words of our King: With God's grace you may yet become the example which all the world will follow.

We also need some fire wardens in the battle of ideas. Their job would be to kindle rather than extinguish fires—to see that all men burn for Canada's Big Idea.

There will be no rationing of:
